I. GENERAL INFORMATION

1. General overview

Established as a Belgian colony in 1908, the Republic of the Congo gained its independence in 1960, but its early years were marred by political and social instability. Colonel Joseph Mobutu seized power and declared himself president in a November 1965 coup. He subsequently changed his name - to Mobutu Sese Seko - as well as that of the country - to Zaire. Mobutu retained his position for 32 years through several sham elections, as well as through the use of brutal force.

Ethnic strife and civil war, touched off by a massive inflow of refugees in 1994 from fighting in Rwanda and Burundi, led in May 1997 to the toppling of the Mobutu regime by a rebellion backed by Rwanda and Uganda and fronted by Laurent Kabila. He renamed the country "the Democratic Republic of the Congo" (DRC), but in August 1998 his regime was itself challenged by a second insurrection again backed by Rwanda and Uganda. Troops from Angola, Chad, Namibia, Sudan, and Zimbabwe intervened to support Kabila's regime.

Laurent Kabila was assassinated in January 2001 and his son, Joseph Kabila, was named Head of State.

The transitional government held a successful constitutional referendum in December 2005 and elections for the presidency, National Assembly, and provincial legislatures in 2006. Kabila was inaugurated president in December 2006 and reelected in 2011.

Population: 68,692,542 note: estimates for this country explicitly take into account the effects of excess mortality due to AIDS; this can result in lower life expectancy, higher infant mortality, higher death rates, lower population growth rates, and changes in the distribution of population by age and sex than would otherwise be expected.

Age structure:

- 0-14 years: 46.9% (male 16,161,301/female 16,038,024)

- 65 years and over: 2.5% (male 699,667/female 1,021,070)

Sex ratio:

- at birth: 1.03 male(s)/female
- under 15 years: 1.01 male(s)/female
- 15-64 years: 0.99 male(s)/female
- 65 years and over: 0.68 male(s)/female
- total population: 0.99 male(s)/female

Life expectancy at birth:

- total population: 54.36 years
- male: 52.58 years
- female: 56.2 years

Urbanization:

- urban population: 34% of total population (2008)
- rate of urbanization: 5.1% annual rate of change (2005-2010)

2. Food and basic supply

Local markets usually provide basic staple food. Some shops and supermarkets also have imported products for household consumption. Most families buy food on a daily basis. There are state-owned companies supplying water and electricity to households all over the country, however, only in the urban areas. The water supply depends on the electricity supply and the electricity company is facing technical problems to provide electricity regularly.

There are many super markets at Kinshasa as well as in main towns in DRC where people can get food and manufactured items they need:

3. Transportation

Land transportation is a problem insofar as there are practically no roads that connect one city to another. Trips can take weeks if not months to cover relatively short distances. Railway transportation is available between some cities only. Yet the trains are mostly in such a precarious condition that people fear to put their lives on the line by using this mode of travel. Air transport is smoother than any other mode, but since the country has different administrations, the possibility to travel is highly restricted. Access to remote areas is very difficult.

Buses and taxis in Kinshasa

One way is approximately 0,25 $ for a bus and 0,5 $ for a shared taxi. Parked Taxi : about 5 to 10 $ one way and 15 $ a hour (i.e. at Airport or Luxury Hotel) Euro Car, AVIS and others car hiring companies: approximately 100 $ with a driver and 80 $ without driver a day. There is a public transportation company that is starting in Kinshasa and in major cities with new buses.

Two public transportation companies (Société de Transport Urbain au Congo - STUC- and City Train) are restarting in Kinshasa and in other major cities with new buses. The government has new public transportation society (TRANSCO) with brand new buses.

There are small private societies involved in public transportation between Kinshasa and Matadi for about 30$ with for a taxi and 15$ for a bus; and Kinshasa – Boma/Muanda: 45$. Recently, there are buses between Kinshasa and Kikwit (in Bandundu Province) for about 25$ for a bus and 60$ for a jeep taxi.

Rail

Five major separate railway systems exist in the DRC. The oldest line links the ocean port of Matadi to Kinshasa. The longest line, Ilebo-Dilolo-Lubumbashi, connects the mining area of southern Katanga Region to the port of Ilebo on the Kasai River and ultimately to Kinshasa by the Kasai and Congo rivers. There are other minor systems in north-east Congo. The 140-km Mayumbe railway in Bas-Congo links the ocean port of Boma to the agricultural area of Tshiela and Cabinda.

The government has bought 11 new trains (DRC Government announcement during the first week of June 2013) to boost the transportation between mentioned locations and create new employment opportunity.

Air

The country's major international airport is N'Djili in Kinshasa, which is served regularly by a number of international airlines en route throughout Africa and direct to Europe and Asia. Private carriers and small charter companies support air travel within DRC, and since the installation of the TNG some flights between Kinshasa and the East are now operating. Loano in Lubumbashi is also an international airport.

International flights

Following international air companies flying in DRC: Brussels Air Lines, Air France, Royal Air Maroc, Turkish Airways, Kenya Airways, South African Airways, Asky, Camair.

All RDC domestic air companies are in the European's black list for security reasons. The main domestic air company that covers different destinations in DRC is Compagnie Africaine d'Aviation (CAA) when others have limit flights capacity.

4. Telecommunications

The state-owned National Mail and Telephone Office (SCPT) faces competition from private companies both in the postal as well as the telecommunication sector. Many persons prefer to use the services offered by private companies as the SCPT is generally conceived to be poorly functioning. Over the last couple of years the mobile phone services provided by a variety of private companies have virtually replaced SCPT.

Post

There are many companies, both state and private owned, that offer postal services (to areas where access is possible). These companies include the National Mail and Telephone Office (SCPT), DHL, Kin Service Express and other local agencies. However, it is reported that the state owned SCPT is not operating properly, and due to this, they do not have many clients anymore. The country code for the Democratic Republic of the Congo is +243. There are no prefixes in place for the regions. The +243 code is under control of Post, Telephone and New Information and Communication Technologies High Authority that accept companies willing to invest in this field. Phone system

The national wire telecommunications network of OCPT is considerably deteriorated and has been overtaken by the cellular expansion. GSM mobile phone providers have virtually replaced the state-owned telecommunications company, ensuring people's access all over the country to both domestic and international telecommunication.

Thus, while landline telecommunication systems exist but with very limited function, the preferred telecommunication option among the general public is mobile phones and/or the internet. This also means that the use of fax in the DRC is very limited.

Internet

Internet connections are available in the country's bigger cities. There are many Internet providers such as Vodanet – Microcom, Cyber Net, Standard Télécom, Iburst Africa/DRC, Comax. The connection is about 450$ to 1000$ and the monthly cost is from 100$ to 300$ according to the needs. Prepaid option is also available.

A monthly internet subscription costs approximately US$ 20 but cheaper options can also be found. One hour in an internet café costs around US$ 2.

Cell phone or GSM Mobile Systems

As mentioned above, over the last three years, GSM mobile phone companies have all replaced the state-owned telecommunications company SCPT. This has made it possible for people all over the country to communicate and exchange information and has also ensured international telecommunication.

Cellular phone services are offered by private owned companies such as Vodacom, Zain (that has recently replaced Celtel), Standard telecom, Sait-Telecom, Congo-Chine Telecom, and Starcel. All main cities are covered by mobile phone companies.

II. HOUSING

It is difficult to describe the housing situation in general terms. There are no official real estate agencies, which makes it impossible to get trustworthy information on availability, rents, sale, etc. Although renting is the most common type of accommodation, people who have the money and the opportunity often buy a piece of land on which they build a house for themselves.

There are no administrative impediments for buying and selling land, save the fact that a great deal of caution should be exerted in real estate purchase. Some people have bought property that has been sold to two or more other buyers. In DR of Congo, operate so-called 'Commissionaires', who are a sort of 'moving agencies'. These people have a list of places recorded on paper and sit at a corner of a street with their boards. They are handy in finding places of all sorts (houses, shops, flats...). They'll take you to places you'd be interested in looking at. The commissionaires play an important role in finding a house in Kinshasa because they are in contact with owners. They have 10 % of the deal (purchasing price or monthly rent). And reliability depends on individuals.

Accommodation

- 1) 50 to 200 $ monthly rental for an apartment of 1 or 2 bedrooms depending on the area (with kitchen, bathroom and dining room).
- 2) Hotel: +/-50 upto 150 $ a day
- 3) Meal: +/-20 $

Purchasing

- 1) Purchasing certificate (mainly delivered by customer Chief)
- 2) Rent contract (at the Cadastral office)
- 3) Value making : building of house even the smallest
- 4) Record Certificate: 3 years after value making. It is a definitive ownership prove.

House purchasing

- 1) Purchasing certificate (made by the seller)
- 2) Estate Certificate for ownership transfer (at the town hall)
- 3) Taxes (Urbanism and Land Offices)

Rent

Six months guaranty with three prepaid months + one month as Commission) depending on places in the city. In luxury compounds the prices hereafter are multiplied by two or three.

- US $ 50 to 100 per month for an apartment of one bedroom including dining room, kitchen, bath room and Water closet
- US $ 100 to 200 per month for an apartment of two bedrooms including dining room, kitchen, bath room and Water closet
- US $ 250 to 500 or 1000 per month for an apartment of three bedrooms including dining room, kitchen, bath room and Water closet

Housing provisions

Available for vulnerable cases (including shelters for victims of trafficking)

Elderly people are accommodated in some public homes in Kinshasa and in some provinces in the DRC, although very limited.

Street children are taken in charge by some NGOs and churches until their reintegration in the family or in socio-professional life by some adults and vocational trained ones.

IOM Kinshasa has upgraded two street children centres of Don Bosco's Salesians Nuns congregation in both Kinshasa (Mazzarello House) and Lubumbashi to be used if there are victims of trafficking under the Southern Africa Countries' Trafficking Assistance Programme. This programme aims to prevent and fight against counter trafficking in the African Southern Region.

III. HEALTH AND MEDICAL CARE

Basically in every large city there is a general hospital, private clinics and health care centres to provide health care services to the population. Rural areas, by contrast, do not always have these facilities nearby. Even though health care is provided in large cities, it is recommended to have certain ailments treated in hospitals abroad since most hospitals do not have the necessary equipment -The ones they have, have not been renewed for several decades. So anything from a stroke to head surgery or implants is often recommended for treatment abroad. Most cases are referred to doctors in South Africa, Belgium or France.

In public hospitals treatment is cheaper than in the private ones. In despite this, it is not easy to access due to the general poverty in the country. Patients are transferred to a superior medical level for a serious health problem.

Consultation fee and consulting with a physician: about 5, 10 to 20 $

1. Medical and Hospitals structure

Small Health Post (dispensary, medical points) for minor health problems
Health Centre: for minor and serious health problems
General Hospital and Specialized Centres: for minor, serious and special health problems
Clinic: for serious, special and complicated health problems.

Medicaments for the treatment of some diseases (TBC, malaria, hepatitis, children's diseases, HIV) are available in Small Health Posts (dispensaries, medical points), Health Centre, General Hospital and Specialized Centres and in Clinic. There is no health insurance system in DRC. There are many Small Health Posts (dispensaries, medical points) and Health Centre in each Commune in Kinshasa and in each Administrative Sector in Regions. There is one General Hospital and Specialized Centre in big towns as well as in Administrative Territories in Regions and there are some Clinics (public and private) in Kinshasa.

2. Info on AIDS from the AIDS National Programme

Blood test

This test is almost free of charge since many medical institutions are in programme with the AIDS National Programme with the help of International Aid. There are many hospitals and medical centres in the country where HIV test can be made. In Kinshasa, apart from INRB (National Institute of Bio-Medical Research) and Ngaliema Clinic; there are other centres such as:

- Centre de Victoire: 61, Avenue Victoire, Commune de Kasa-Vubu
- Centre de Traitement Ambulatoire (CTA), Avenue Kabinda – dans l'enceinte du Centre de Dépistage de la Tuberculose (CDT), en face de la Radio Nationale
- CSAC AMOCONGO, 12 Avenue ASSOSSA, Quartier Salongo/Kasa-Vubu
- AMOCONGO – N'djili, 12 Rue Londo, Quartier 9, Commune de N'djili
- FEMME PLUS, 112 Rue Lokelenge/Ngiri-Ngiri et sur 70 Avenue Muanza, Commune de Kisenso
- Laboratoire National de Référence, Pavillon 11, Hopital Général de Kinshasa
- CHECK UP POUR TOUS, Avenue de la Montagne – Commune de Ngaliema

AIDS treatment

1. Patients medical follow up (20 % in the country and 80 % in Kinshasa)

- a. Opportunist infections treatment
- b. Anti Retro Viral: 29 $ per month

As regards HIV/AIDS treatment, the follow-up can be divided into different types:

This treatment can be divided into two levels, both of which are free of charge:

- Treatment against opportunistic infections;
- Anti-retroviral Treatment.

In addition to these two levels of treatment the patient can also be treated with prophylaxis using Cotrimoxazol. This treatment can be initiated before the Anti-retroviral treatment is started or be used as a complementary treatment during the antiretroviral treatment.

Several hospitals and clinics in the private sector as well as in the public sector offer HIV/AIDS treatment in Kinshasa, such as:

- Kinshasa General Clinic
- University Clinic
- Ngaliema Clinic
- Kitambo Clinic
- Bondeko Clinic
- Yolo Medical Clinic
- Saint Joseph Hospital
- Nganda Center
- Kinshasa Medical Center
- Gombele Medical Clinic
- Roi Baudouin Clinic
- N'djili Hospital
- Marie Biamba Mutombo Clinic

In addition to these public and private hospitals and clinics, there are also NGOs which provide the same assistance, such as Action Communautaire Sida (ACS) and AMOCONGO.

HIV/AIDS treatment is generally available also outside of Kinshasa, including the provision of antiretroviral medications. The treatment is free of charge. However, some patients pay for treatment when they can afford it. Persons that pay for their treatment often do so to avoid hospitals using free-of-charge medicines.

IV. ECONOMY AND SOCIAL SECURITY

Since the job market is inundated with graduate job seekers from university, it is hard to find a good job. Even the best diploma is mostly useless. Recently, non-governmental and international organizations have been the major employers, and most of the jobs created are in the development field. Typical activities include project management, logistics, and radio operations.

Generally speaking, there is a higher salary for persons who do have a university diploma. Job announcements are rarely advertised in newspapers. They are passed by oral propaganda to close friends and relatives -save for the very few cases where advertisements are posted on the gates or in the lobby of a company. More often than not, companies advertise a position for the sake of observance of internal regulations only. It is customary to select an insider even prior to posting the job advertisement.

Provided that some arrangement or a sort of agreement is made prior to return, no expectations should be raised as to financial assistance and pension money. Pensions are not a customary practice in the Republic. Big companies used to pay pensions to retired workers, but now the social security scheme is ineffective. The Ministry of Labour and Social Security can be contacted, however, more for specialized counseling with regard to mechanism and structure to channel these cases.

1. Employment

There is no major sector that offers significant job opportunity since companies and other structures have been looted from the beginning of the 90s. In addition, civil wars have increased the crisis. To the National Office for Employment, there are other private Institutions (such as Job Factory) in charge of job issues but with limited capabilities. Small businesses and micro-enterprises are the main economic activities.

The Government is planning to renew the administration with young qualified staff to reinforce the public administration's capacity and modernization.

United Nations agencies and International organization such MONUSCO and International organization for migration (IOM DRC) are the main actors in employment sector as they offer possibility to recruit young qualified Congolese all over the country.

2. Banking

The banking system in the DRC is recovering after a period of turmoil. Foreign banks such as the Citibank, Belgolaise, Stanbic Bank, etc. are operating in Kinshasa and Lubumbashi. Transferring money within the country can be done through 'money transfer operations', with several agencies such as "Western Union", "Mister Cash", "Soficom", "Solidaire" or "Money Gramm" that are operating in all urban areas.

Opening a bank account is a simple procedure; a person must write an application formally requesting the opening, fill out the necessary forms and make a deposit (between US$ 100 (75.4€) and US$ 3,000 (2262.00€)). Due to market challenge, saving bank account opening is now for free in Pro-credit Bank and in Congo African International Bank (BIAC = Banque Internationale pour l'Afrique au Congo).

The Congolese Franc (CDF) is the official currency of the DRC. The exchange rate is determined by the foreign exchange market. The exchange rate for the Congolese Franc is approximately CDF 840 for US$ 1 (local market rate in April 2009). Some of the banks are listed below:

4. Micro credits

Both NGOs and international organizations implement micro-credit programs in the DRC but under various conditions (e.g. to belong to a certain group of society, normally groups considered as vulnerable, and the amount that can be received is limited). Micro-credit programs are commonly destined only for households having at least one of the members considered as “vulnerable” and are based on sustainable micro-projects to be defined with the candidate.

Recently also various financial banking institutions (e.g. Pro-credit, Finca, Hope-Drc, and Congo African International Bank) have opened up for access to micro-credits, but these are generally loans that have to be repaid.

Below is a list of some financial banking institutions:

5. Opportunities to set up a business

In order to open a shop or office, certain procedures need to be followed. For instance, an authorization needs to be obtained and a commerce registration needs to be made to the Ministry of Commerce. The costs related to the procedures to be followed when opening small shops/offices are as follows, apart from monthly taxes to be paid:

Taxes (in Kinshasa):

- Authorization: US$ 200
- Commerce Register (Identification): US$ 60
- ANR : Agence Nationale de Renseignement (National Investigation Agency): US$ 100
- Culture and Art: US$ 50
- Environment: US$ 50

It normally does not take long to go through this procedure. The person receives the papers as soon as he/she pays the fees. The time needed to proceed with these steps generally depends strongly on the company assigned.

- Public transportation : Taxi driving or Mini Bus
- Bar
- Shop of basic consumption items

6. Custom Issues

The Ofida ("Office de douane et accises") is the Government office in charge of custom in DRC. The taxation is based on "Ad valorem" or on "Specific" value systems.

Based on the law n° 009-2003 of 18 march 2003 on merchandises value determination (items final costs or the estimate until the entry point in the DRC), the payment of all relevant costs are done to the Ofida that will split it for concerned services¹.

V. EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

There are universities all over the country, both private and public. They offer a wide range of courses and degrees at the undergraduate and graduate level. For doctoral studies and post-doctoral research, most people prefer to go overseas. Within the Ministry of education, there is a department tasked with the recognition of academic degrees. Those who can afford to pay for their children's tuition do not hesitate to choose a "good" private school for quality education.

The organization of the educational system in the DRC is similar to that of Belgium, the country's former colonial power. Public education is guaranteed for both boys and girls but is not free of charge. The parents have to pay a tuition fee, which forms a practical obstacle for some families to enroll their children in school. Some families prioritize the schooling of boys over girls, who are often assigned domestic responsibilities instead.

1. Access to primary and high school or University

(including difference between private and public school)

As mentioned above, the education system in the DRC is in its organization similar to the educational system of Belgium. The school system has a total of twelve grades, with grades one to six being primary (primaires) and seven to twelve being secondary/high school (secondaires).

In despite free education in public schools (from 1st to 3rd form in primary schools) in DRC provinces except Kinshasa and Katanga province, Education is not free of charge and parents have to pay a tuition fee, usually between US$ 10 and US$ 300 per trimester depending on the reputation of the school in question. Families with sufficient means will normally send their children to a school of good reputation to assure quality education.

There are three private foreign schools in Kinshasa that are mostly attended by the children of international workers in Kinshasa.

Although access to schooling is guaranteed, tuition fees are a practical obstacle for some families. The administration of the education school is centralized, with the overall control ensured by the Ministry of Education.

Universities, both private and public, can be found all over the country. There are many Universities, mostly in main cities that offer a wide range of courses and degrees at the undergraduate and graduate level.

For doctoral studies and post-doctoral research, most people prefer to go overseas. Within the Ministry of Education, there is a department tasked with the recognition of academic degrees.

Recognition of foreign diplomas

All foreign diplomas are recognized by the Ministry of Education through the Education General Inspection. They refer to UNESCO's report on worldwide education.

2. Vocational training courses, scholarship and grants available

The Minister of Labor and Social Protection is very active in the domain of vocational training, and the government has made noticeable efforts in this respect since its appointment. However, the vocational programs remain the initiative of local NGOs and International Partners in the country, such as ILO, UNDP and IOM.

The trainings are destined mainly to provide interested candidates with the basic knowledge on handmade, traditional occupations such as mechanics, electronics, electricity, secretarial skills, computer, dress making, hair and beauty courses, car driving, carpentry, brick making, and shoe making.

However, there is no scholarship or grants available. People have access to these training courses from their own means or with the help of NGOs or churches associations.

Although there is formally no discrimination between boys and girls in the access to education, girls in rural areas are often assigned.

3. Lack of Assistance to vulnerable children and unaccompanied minors

There are many obstacles to assistance to vulnerable orphans and unaccompanied children such as:

- Existence of a couple unavailing approaches in the field of vulnerable and unaccompanied child protection;
- Economic crisis and high level of unemployment (98% of active population) increased by the global financial crisis ;
- High rate of none education of young people (60%);
- Presence of children in streets and massive internal and external migration ;
- Abduction and disappearance of children from villages, cities and towns of DRC ;
- Allegations and children found victims of trafficking ;
- Lack of support to structures (services or NGOs) in charge of vulnerable and unaccompanied minors ;
- Lack of rules in the field of assistance to vulnerable and unaccompanied minors ;
- Lack of good education or vocational training to vulnerable and unaccompanied minors ;
- Lack of respect of children's international adoption ;
- Vulnerable and unaccompanied minors are victims of irregular migration and trafficking in neighboring countries and to Eastern and Western countries.

VI. GENDER ISSUES

Although some women do work in high positions in the companies, generally speaking women are foremost housewives who take care of the children and the husband. Women are often considered an "aide" to the man. Women are usually enjoying greater opportunities in big cities than in rural areas where minds tend to be strongly ingrained with traditional customs. The parliament voted a law to recognize genre equality between men and women, but women have to fight a lot to arrive to the gender equality.

VII. SUPPORT TO NGO'S

There are many associations and NGO's around Kinshasa and major cities. They are involved in support to raped women, orphans, street children and single mothers.
